ACTIVITIES OF THE COMMISSION

INTERACTIVE PROGRAMME ON ISSUES RELATED TO WOMEN & CHILDREN

On 6th June 2014, the Meghalaya State Commission for Women had organized a one day interactive programme at Mawlasnai village, Ri Bhoi District. This programme was attended by heads of Traditional Institutions & women's group from Mawlasnai and its neighbouring villages, the Chairperson, MSCW, officials from Social Welfare Department, & members of the Commission. During the interactive programme, Shri. P.Marwein, General Secretary of Mawlasnai village, said that for the first time such programme is being organized for women and it is indeed going to be beneficial. Problems of early marriage, teenage pregnancy, desertion, domestic violence exist in the village. There were suggestions that the Commission's intervention is needed in creating awareness about issues related to women and children and that there is a need for a coordinated effort amongst the head of different traditional institutions to bring about improvement in the living conditions and status of women and children.

INDEPENDENT INQUIRY

The Meghalaya State Commission for Women had conducted an independent inquiry into the alleged torture, abduction and confinement of the twelve girls accused of sex racket by the members of AMA, CSWO, and GHSHR at Daldagre, West Garo Hills from 20 May to 21 June 2014. The Meghalaya State Commission for Women Inquiry Committee was constituted on the 12th of May to conduct an inquiry into the above matter. The inquiry started on the 20th of May 2014 where the Chairperson met with Deputy Commissioner and the Superintendent of Police, West Garo Hills for first hand information. The Commission met the twelve victims on the 21st of May at the designated Shelter Home (SMELC) and took their statement individually. Throughout the inquiry, the Commission took statements from 44 witnesses. The findings and suggestions of the MSCW Inquiry Committee were submitted to the Honourable Home Minister & Principal Secretary, Social Welfare, Government of Meghalaya.

Some of the key suggestions that emerged out of the inquiry committee are as follows:

- There is a lot of ignorance about legal provisions/matters all around. Sincere efforts will have to be made to create awareness in the churches, medical professionals, administration, police, all educational institutions and society in general.
- Workshops, seminars, hoardings, etc should all be intensified to spread awareness. The need of the hour is a close cooperation and coordination urgently required to be taken seriously amongst the district administration/authorities/civil societies and the general public at large to avoid the occurrence of such incidents in the future.
- There should be more street lights and patrolling for the safety and security of the citizens in the urban and rural areas as well, to avoid the occurrence of undesirable incidents, especially for the women and children.
- Counseling centers, especially for adolescent youth are urgently needed.

LEADERSHIP TRAINING & CAPACITY BUILDING FOR ADOLESCENT GIRLS

A Leadership Training & Capacity building for Adolescent Girls has been organised on the 1st & 2nd August 2014 at the Meghalaya Bharat Scout and Guides by the Meghalaya State Commission for Women. More than 36 students from different educational institutions in the three district of Jaintia, Ri Bhoi & East Khasi Hills participated in the programme. The feedback of one of the participants as quoted “everything that was taught was very useful and informative and has broadened my view and perspective of the things I learnt. I intend to not only use it for my benefit but spread the knowledge I have gained”. The Resource Persons for the two days programme were from People’s Learning Centre, Teach for India fellow, Meghalaya Police, Health Department and Meghalaya State Commission for Women. The members inquired about their respective cases held in different court and were satisfied with the proceeding of each case. Altogether there were 11 inmates during the visit.

The Commission observed that the rooms were small and congested and the living arrangement needs to be improved. Vocational training provided is not up to the mark and extra training to be enhanced. It was suggested that a separate nursing room for mothers with children and counseling session for the inmates needs to be provided.

VISIT TO GANESH DAS HOSPITAL, SHILLONG

The Meghalaya State commission for Women in its visit to Ganesh Das Hospital on the 15th October 2014 met the Medical Superintendent, who briefed the members on the health care facilities provided for women and children in the wake of the recent fire that broke out at the labour room complex on the 6th October 2014.

The Commission inspected the Labour room and other wards located in the hospital complex. The renovation work is in progress and temporary arrangement to ensure limited delivery services is being done. It was learned that normal services will be functioning soon. The Commission observed that there are limited services of manpower to cater to the needs of children in the 100 bedded Pediatric Ward. The Commission is impressed with the facilities at the ICU, but unfortunately the acute shortage of nursing staff is disheartening.

The Commission felt that there is an urgent need to complete the newly constructed hospital complex in view of the increase number of registered cases of women and children. It is also viewed with serious concern regarding the shortage of manpower which needs to be strengthened as per the guidelines since it is the only hospital catering to the need of women and children.

SHILLONG: Taking cognizance of the alleged illegal confinement, kidnapping and torture of 12 girls in Tura, the state government has ordered a high-level inquiry into the incident even as Home Minister Roshan Warjri has sought a report from the Deputy Commissioner of West Garo Hills Pravin Bakshi on the matter.

The decision to probe the incident was taken after the Social Welfare Minister Deborah C. Marak held a meeting to discuss the issue.

The high-level inquiry committee will be headed by commissioner & secretary of Secretariat Administration Department (SAD) M.H.K. Marak.

Speaking to reporters after the meeting, Deborah Marak said that she wanted an impartial probe into the entire episode, adding the committee would be assisted by the district social welfare officer/joint district social welfare officer, Tura.

The committee would inquire into the allegations made in local newspapers and the circumstances there under; to inquire into the nature and extent of injuries of the victims and the medical support or assistance rendered to them; to examine the relevant documents, complaints and SHILLONG: The Meghalaya State Commission for Women (MSCW) has decided to institute an inquiry into the alleged kidnapping and confining of twelve women in Tura.

Informing this here on Monday, MSWC chairperson Theilin Phanbuh said the inquiry panel will be headed by its vice chairperson Gamchi Marak, who will be assisted by a member Angela Ingty.

According to Phanbuh, the commission would take at least one month's time to submit its report and added that the members of the panel would meet all the 12 victims to record their statements.

Meanwhile, Marak said the inquiry panel had been constituted to find the truth.

The inquiry committee would have to submit its report within a month.

Earlier, five self-styled activists were arrested in connection with illegal confinement, kidnapping and torture of the teenagers who were held captive for eight day by the 'activists'

ANDREW W. LYNDOH

Shillong, July 11: The Meghalaya State Commission for Women has come down heavily on "social activists" in the alleged detention and torture of 12 girls in Tura under West Garo Hills, and termed the incident as a case of "moral policing" and "gross violation of human rights".

The commission, which had conducted an inquiry into the incident, had submitted its report to the state government recently. In the course of the inquiry, the commission had examined 44 people, including the girls.

These 12 girls, who were branded "call girls" by the "activists", were allegedly detained, tortured and assaulted in the rented accommodation of one of the "activists", Jaynie Ningring Sangma, at Daldagre in Tura.

According to the commission, which released its findings to the media today, the girls were reportedly picked up from vehicles at Chasingre, Orchid lodge at Asanang and from their respective homes at intervals on different dates.

The girls were kept at Jaynie's rented house from May 1 to May 8, the commission said. It also said that the NGOs involved in the incident were the Civil Society Women's Organisation, Achik Mothers' Association and Garo Hills Sentinel for Human Rights.

"Many witnesses have confirmed the torture, including physical assault, verbal assault, intimidation and public viewing and humiliation of victims as sex workers, also allowing of taking pictures, videos of the beatings, uploading of the same on the social media and threat to life. One girl was so intimidated that she was even contemplating suicide," the commission observed.

From the statement of all the victims, the commission concluded that it was clear that they were "illegally detained, confined and tortured, both physically and mentally, and also threatened with dire consequences by taking the names of militant groups (GNLA)".

Commission vice-chairperson Gamchi Marak and member Angela R. Ingty had conducted the probe into the incident.

While Marak stated that it could not be established that the 12 victims were "call girls", the findings pointed out that the incident was "very much a stark case of moral policing and vigilantism disregarding the law and duping the administration, police and public". A gross violation of human rights was also observed in the case, the commission added.

The commission said West Garo Hills deputy commissioner Pravin Bakshi "had an inkling" of what was going, but was "not aware" that Jaynie and her group were detaining the girls and keeping them confined. Bakshi was "only in the knowledge" that Jaynie and others were "counselling" the girls, the commission claimed.

"A mediator reportedly co-ordinated and acted as a go-between the administration and the NGOs in the matter of premeditated busting of the alleged sex racket. The administration viewed the NGOs at face value and took the matter lightly without verifying their antecedents. The media seems to have called all the shots and was reluctant to inform the police on the matter," the findings revealed.

The deputy commissioner had suggested that the media-person co-ordinate with the police during the raid, which the latter had failed to do so and this reflects the lack of co-ordination between the administration and the police, the commission added.

Coming to the church members, the commission said those who were called to give counselling were not provided with full information about the torture, all of which continued even as the "spiritual counselling" was taking place.

"The Church is also found to be too trusting and ignorant of women's legislation and related laws. Without verifying matters, it went about counselling the girls," the findings stated.

Further, the findings noted that the NGOs had a "nexus" with some police personnel and reportedly worked together. However, it said West Garo Hills superintendent of police Mukesh Singh was found "to be unaware of the happenings".

"The subordinates failed to report to their higher-ups. The policeman in question (B.N. Marak) failed to go by the rules, and acted on emotions without verifying the claims of the NGOs. The inspector concerned had not even called the women police or taken the girls to the women's cell of the police station, but instead, informed the NGOs and handed the girls over to them, which is highly illegal and unfounded," the commission pointed out.

The failure on the officer's part had "complicated the whole situation", it added.

On May 1 evening, during vehicular checks, Marak had reportedly zeroed on two vehicles, one coming from Williamnagar and the other from Tura, the commission said.

The Williamnagar vehicle had four occupants, of whom two of them were girls while the other had six occupants, of whom three were girls, the commission said.

The policeman then reportedly informed the "activists", the commission said, adding that while the police took away the five men to the police station, the "activists" brought the girls to Jaynie's house.

In the subsequent days, the other seven girls were picked up from different places in and around Tura, it added.

From the overall observations, the commission said it was found that the so-called "torture was made at the house and not at the police station".

"Even the doctor stated that the bruises appearing on some of the girls' bodies were not fresh bruises as the victims were sent for medical check-up on May 8 itself," the commission said.

Moreover, the commission noted that several illegal activities were openly taking place in Tura district jail where prisoners could even have access to mobile phones and interact with the outside world.

It also said prisoners were beaten up inside the jail, but the jail authorities have not been serious enough to communicate this to their seniors to correct the system for the safety of the prisoners.

Apart from the findings, the commission had also submitted a slew of suggestions to the government to prevent similar occurrences from recurring. One of these suggestions includes that the district administration should be more vigilant about different NGOs and not just listen to them at face value. It also suggested conducting legal awareness drive and setting up of a shelter home.

Panel appeals to witnesses

OUR CORRESPONDENT

Shillong, Oct. 10: The Meghalaya State Commission for Women has urged witnesses to come forward and aid the investigation into the alleged rape and murder of a 15-year-old girl in Meghalaya's East Garo Hills district.

Nation-building starts in educational institutions: GHP Raju

By Our Reporter

SHILLONG: Addressing a group of college and university students to observe, 'International Day for the Elimination of All Forms of Violence Against Women,' organised by the State Commission for Women in collaboration with Martin Luther Christian University, Inspector General of Police, Meghalaya, GHP Raju said that while the use of technology and gadgets like smart phones, ipads, laptop computers etc has reduced the isolation between human beings it has also made us more vulnerable to cyber crimes.

Raju warned the audience about uploading private pictures on Whatsapp because those pictures can be accessed by cyber criminals and morphed in order to blackmail or stalk a person.

He said that mobile service providers regularly sell client information to companies for a sum and that is how different companies send mobile advertisements to mobile phone users.

"There is no such thing as a protected password or privacy in the virtual world. Every document can be accessed by the service providers like Google," Raju informed.

Speaking about the rights of a girl child or woman not to allow unwanted advances by the opposite sex and to be touched, Raju said it is the duty of schools and colleges to educate the students about these rights and what redress they could seek against those who make these advances.

"Child pornography is the biggest trap and many cyber criminals morph the innocent faces of children to produce such visuals. Visiting pornographic sites is an offence under the Information Technology Act," Raju informed adding that at malls and garment stores where women try on their clothes before buying them, they should be extra cautious to find out if some hidden camera is placed anywhere inside the trial rooms.

Raju further exhorted the State Commission for Women to organize similar awareness programmes for parents. He said parents should monitor who the Facebook friends of their teenage children are and who they are chatting with because a stranger could get their private information and use that to blackmail them or for other criminal purposes.

Earlier, Patricia Mukhim, Editor, The Shillong Times, spoke about ethics and sensitization of the media vis-à-vis eliminating violence against women. She stated that the media follows a set of ethics but media persons still need to build their capacities in understanding gender concepts and sensitive reportage.

Others who spoke on the occasion included N.G. Shylla, an advocate, Theilin Phanbuh, Chairperson, State Commission for Women and Melari Diengdoh, Dept. of Social Work, MLCU.

Women's panel for science labs to ensure justice

OUR CORRESPONDENT

Shillong, Feb. 9: The National Commission for Women (NCW) has sent a proposal to the Centre to establish and strengthen robust and state-of-the-art Forensic Science Laboratories in the country in order to ensure speedier and effective investigations, especially in relation to crimes against women.

This was disclosed today by NCW member Shamina Shafiq, who had been camping in the state since Saturday. She met women's groups, NGOs, government officials and members of the Meghalaya State Commission for Women. "A proposal has been sent to the Centre to provide financial assistance under the Nirbhaya Fund for establishing such Forensic Science Laboratories (FSLs)," Shafiq told journalists.

She was answering queries on the lack of state-of-the-art FSLs in the country, particularly in the Northeast, which has hampered investigations on various crimes, especially crimes against women.

The FSL in Meghalaya has been a target of criticism for being ill-equipped to deal with several cases. In most instances, forensic materials have to be sent to places like Calcutta for examination, which only lead to delays in solving crimes.

Shafiq also disclosed that the NCW would embark on a socio-economic and political survey of women across the country, beginning with the Northeast.

The Meghalaya State Commission for Women along with the social work department of the Martin Luther Christian University (MLCU) will conduct the sample survey.

The survey is meant to prepare policy recommendations for the development and empowerment of women on social, economic and political issues. The NCW has made the exercise flexible as states are allowed to put in questions, which are in sync with the socio-economic and political landscape of the states. In Meghalaya, the sample survey will cover around 1,100 women who are 18 years and above in all the 11 districts of the state. The areas to be covered include urban, semi-urban and rural.

Two surveyors will be put in place in each of the districts. The exercise is likely to commence from this week onwards, as the sample survey has to be completed within 60 days.

According to the 2011 census, Meghalaya has 14,75,057 women out of the total population of 29,64,007. The country's female population as per the same census stands at 587,447,730 out of a total population of 1,210,569,573.

"We are more interested to know the status of accessing state and centrally sponsored programmes especially by women in the rural areas," the NCW member said.

Shafiq, who was all praise for Meghalaya's matrilineal system, the institution of headmen and the presence of Asia's cleanest village at Mawlynnong, wondered why women were not given space in the executive committees of village councils (darbar shmong).

"I am impressed with the institution of headmen in the villages, but yesterday when I met the headmen of Sohryngkham (one of the biggest villages) I asked him why women are not being made members of the executive committees of village councils. I feel it would be of great significance if women are also made members of these committees," Shafiq told reporters before she left for New Delhi.

However, the NCW member expressed concern when it was pointed out that tardy investigations and low conviction rate in cases related to crimes against women.

On what has changed after the Delhi rape case of December 2012, Shafiq claimed that people's mindsets in the country vis-a-vis women's issues had altered for the better.

"The enactment of stringent laws in regard to crimes against women had also been done, but we need better implementation," she said.
